

PROJECT:
CYBERBULLYING AND
HARASSMENT ON TIKTOK
AND OTHER SOCIAL MEDIA PLATFORMS

In recent years, social media platforms like TikTok have become a popular means of communication and entertainment for millions of people worldwide. However, along with its many benefits, social media has also given rise to a disturbing trend – cyberbullying. Cyberbullying refers to the use of electronic communication to harass, intimidate, or embarrass someone, and it can have serious consequences for the victim's mental health and well-being.

Creating a safe and inclusive online environment for all users is important. This is especially true for social media platforms like TikTok, where many users are teenagers and young adults who are more susceptible to cyberbullying.

Specialised Security Services has been addressing this concerning trend in several of our previous projects:

In some cases, cyberbullying has led to self-harm and suicide.

ACTION STEPS AGAINST CYBERBULLYING:

- It is crucial to raise awareness about cyberbullying and provide support to those who are affected by it.
- One of the most effective ways to combat cyberbullying on TikTok is to report any incidents of harassment or bullying immediately.
- TikTok has a robust reporting mechanism in place that allows users to report inappropriate content or behaviour.
- By reporting these incidents, users can help TikTok identify and address cyberbullying and protect vulnerable users from further harm.
- Make the most of privacy settings. Investigate what measures you can take to keep content private on the websites you use.
- On Facebook and other social networking sites, you can adjust your settings so that only the people you select are able to see your personal information and posts.
- It's important to check these privacy settings frequently, because sites sometimes change their policies.
- Think before you post.
- Never forget that the internet is public.
- What you put out there can never be erased. If you wouldn't say something in a room full of strangers, don't say it via internet.
- Even letting someone know sensitive or embarrassing information about you via email can have unforeseen consequences.
- Keep personal information personal.
- Don't reveal identifying details about yourself online e.g. address, phone number, school, credit card number, etc.
- Passwords should never be shared.

- Blocking perpetrators on most social media sites will prevent them from viewing your profile or communicating with you in any way.
 - Perpetrators must realise that their abuse will not stay anonymous. Virtually any cyberbullying can be traced back to the perpetrators.

It's also essential to seek emotional support if you're a victim of cyberbullying. Talk to a trusted friend or family member or seek professional counselling to help cope with the negative effects of cyberbullying. Additionally, victims of cyberbullying should consider seeking legal assistance to take appropriate action against the perpetrators.

In conclusion, cyberbullying is a serious issue that needs to be addressed on social media platforms like TikTok. By raising awareness about this issue, reporting incidents of cyberbullying, and providing support to victims, we can create a safe and inclusive online environment for all users. Let's take a stand against cyberbullying and work together to create a positive and welcoming online community.
