PROJECT:
WANTED
CONFIDENCE TRICKSTER,
FRAUDSTER AND THIEF
MICHEAL KALISA

---

It is crucial to understand the severity of electronic scams on social media platforms and the significant risks they pose to individuals. SSS strongly warns against these types of scams and urges people to exercise caution while engaging with unknown individuals on social media.

However, it is important to note that scammers are not just limited to online platforms. They are everywhere, and some of them may go to the extent of establishing relationships with people to exploit them financially. SSS has a team of specialist investigators who are actively working to catch these criminals.

PERSONAL DETAILS:

- Micheal Kalisa is a pseudonym - the real name and surname of the person in this picture have not yet been confirmed.
  - Last known address: 3 Lynton Road, Morningside Manor, Sandton.
  - Last known contact number: +27 73 793 3967.

---

THIS CASE:

- It is important to note that Michael deceived our client by posing as her partner and subsequently borrowed money from her.
- Our client then went to the bank with the understanding that Michael would pay for the loan she took out on his behalf.
- Michael failed to fulfil his promise of paying the monthly instalments; he just disappeared.
- This is a clear case of deception and breach of trust, and our client deserves justice.

Recognising a confidence trickster, often referred to as a "con artist" or "scammer," can be challenging, as they are skilled at manipulating people's trust and emotions. These individuals exploit psychological tactics to deceive and defraud. Here are some common signs and behaviours to help you recognise a confidence trickster:

- Charming and Persuasive:
  - Confidence tricksters are often highly charismatic and persuasive.
  - They use their charm to gain your trust and build a rapport quickly.
- Too Good to Be True:
  - They offer you something that seems too good to pass up, such as a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity, a fantastic deal, or insider information.
- Pressure to Act Quickly:
  - Tricksters create a sense of urgency, pressuring you to make decisions or act without giving you time to think things through.
- Inconsistent Stories:
  - They may provide inconsistent or changing details about themselves and their background.
  - This makes it difficult for you to verify their claims.

- Request for Money or Personal Information:
    - Tricksters often ask for money or personal information, such as your financial details or credit card information.
    - They use this for financial gain or identity theft.
  - Highly Secretive:
    - They insist on keeping things confidential and discourage you from discussing their proposal with others or seeking advice from trusted friends or professionals.
  - Flattery and Empathy:
    - Tricksters may use flattery and empathy to manipulate your emotions and lower your guard.
    - They make you feel special and understood.
  - Playing on Emotions:
    - They exploit emotions such as fear, greed, or compassion to cloud your judgment and make you more susceptible to their schemes.
  - Complex Jargon:
    - Tricksters may use complex language, technical terms, or industry-specific jargon to confuse and intimidate you, making it difficult to question their expertise.
  - Impersonation:
    - Tricksters may impersonate legitimate individuals, organisations, or authorities to gain your trust.
  - Unsolicited Contacts:
    - Be cautious of unsolicited phone calls, emails, or messages from people or organizations you have never interacted with before.
  - Overcoming Objections:
    - They are skilled at overcoming your objections and concerns, providing seemingly logical explanations to dispel doubt.
  - Quick Changes in Circumstances:
    - Confidence tricksters often create scenarios where they experience unexpected financial hardship or emergencies, asking for your help or money.
  - Trust Your Gut:
    - If something does not feel right or raises suspicion, trust your instincts.
    - It's better to be cautious and do more research before proceeding.

Remember that confidence tricksters can be highly deceptive, and their tactics may evolve over time.

Staying informed and sceptical is crucial to protect yourself from falling victim to their schemes.

If you suspect you are dealing with a confidence trickster, it is advisable to disengage and seek advice from trusted sources.
