PROJECT:
THE
"WAR ON LEAKS"
IS LOST

---

Almost a decade after the government declared a nationwide "war on leaks" campaign, the country's purified water supply loss rate has increased by nearly half owing to leaks, theft, or non-payment. In our previous project, we focused on the theft of our water by water tanker syndicates.

Water loss due to pipe leaks is significant in many regions worldwide, including South Africa. Here is an elaboration on the statement that 40% of South Africa's water is lost due to water pipe leaks:

- Infrastructure Challenges:
  - Like many developing countries, South Africa faces challenges in maintaining its water infrastructure.
  - Many water pipes are old and corroded, making them more prone to leaks.
  - Rapid urbanisation and population growth also strain existing infrastructure, increasing wear and tear on pipes.
- Non-Revenue Water (NRW):
  - The water lost due to leaks is often categorised as non-revenue water (NRW).
  - NRW includes leaks and water loss through theft, inaccurate metering, and unauthorised consumption.
  - In South Africa, pipe leaks contribute significantly to NRW.
- Economic Impact:
  - The loss of water due to leaks has economic implications.
  - South Africa invests significant resources in sourcing, treating, and distributing water.
  - When a substantial portion of that water is lost before reaching consumers, it represents a waste of water resources and the financial investments made in water infrastructure.
- Social Implications:
  - Water scarcity is a pressing issue in South Africa, exacerbated by drought and climate change.
  - Water loss due to leaks intensifies this scarcity, affecting communities' access to clean water for drinking, sanitation, and agriculture.
  - This can disproportionately impact marginalised communities that may already struggle with water access.
- Environmental Consequences:
  - Beyond the economic and social impacts, water leaks also have environmental consequences.
  - Wasted water puts additional pressure on already stressed water sources.

- Furthermore, leaking pipes can lead to soil erosion, habitat destruction, and contamination if the leaked water carries pollutants.
  - Efforts to Address the Issue:
    - Recognising the importance of reducing water loss, South Africa has undertaken various initiatives to address pipe leaks and reduce NRW.
    - This includes investing in infrastructure upgrades, implementing leak detection technologies, promoting water conservation measures, and improving maintenance practices.

Overall, addressing water pipe leaks is crucial for South Africa to ensure efficient water use, mitigate water scarcity, and sustainably meet the water needs of its population.
